Police ready to patrol summer hangouts

By WILLIAM B. HAYNES

As long as there have been fences, parks, and corner drug stores, there have been kids hanging out.

And as long as there have been kids hanging around, there have been people harassed, intimidated and sickened by what they perceive as the mindless, slothful, and sometimes rude behavior of adolescents.

As the high school bells ring this last week before school is out for the summer, students will once again flock together.

The police department receives most calls complaining about youths when schools are in the process of closing in the spring and opening again in the fall. Most of the calls come in the evenings.

Although their very presence threatens some residents, police say that the groups of youths are not dangerous.

"They look a hell of a lot more menacing than they are," said Arlington police inspector James Allen. "Any sector car can move 100 kids in two minutes."

"They are worse at night and on weekends and in better weather," said Allen. "It's a little difficult to hangout at 10 below zero."

Kids are dispersed between the 17 schools and parks as well as numerous other locations in Arlington. The popularity of a certain spot changes over the years, and the amount of problems a location generates for neighbors and police fluctuates with the number of teenagers in the neighborhood.

"Playgrounds come and go," said Allen. "Kids grow up, get noisy, and leave and then new ones come."

Recently, certain areas have drawn more complaints and police attention than others.

"We have problems with Robbins Farm in the summer," said police Capt. Eugene DelGazzo. DelGazzo mentioned Thorndike Field and Hurd Field behind Highland Foods in Arlington Heights as other trouble spots.

Safety Officer David McKenna, a former juvenile officer, said the age of the kids hanging out differs a lot between locations.

"At Spy Pond between the Whittemore Street and Linwood Street there are younger kids in their early teens," said McKenna. "But at the wall at the end of Spy Pond Lane it's an older group — much older, between 18 and 40."

"In historic spots like behind the high school, not as many kids hang out there as they used to three or four years ago."

McKenna said Arlington Center has always been a popular place for kids to hangout. "The plaza was designed for people," said McKenna.

"It just so happens there are more young people there than older people and some old people feel intimidated. The adults might want to sit, but the kids move around."

McKenna said the crowd that congregates in Arlington Center differs from Friday night to Saturday night. "Friday night is junior high school night," he said. "The kids are dropped off by their parents, and usually by 10 p.m. the kids are gone." On (Please See KIDS, Page 22)

Leone's shop fire was set, officials say

By CATHERINE WALTHERS

Fire officials believe that Friday's fire at a heights business was deliberately set in several different places after the store was entered from the cellar.

Piles of papers and rubbish were thrown around and set on fire in an office area and main section of Leone's Provisions at 1320 Mass. Ave., according to Fire Services Director Robert Casey.

The specialty grocery store has been the target of three previous break-ins in the past month.

The latest break-in was last Wednesday, two days before the fire, in which thieves rummaged through two cash registers, desk drawers and the meat chest.

Friday's fire blackened the walls and metal ceiling and damaged most of the store's goods before firefighters were called to the scene. Damage will likely exceed $20,000, store owners say.

The fire was reported at 11:29 p.m. by a tenant living in apartments above the store. The tenant was alerted by a smoke detector.

Firefighters evacuated the tenants who were later able to return to their homes.

According to Casey, whoever set the fire forced open a cellar door and broke through a minor partition in the basement to reach the store.

Firefighters were able to extinguish the fire quickly and said the metal ceiling helped contain the fire in the store.

Most of the fire damage occurred in an office area, according to owner David Leone.

The office was pretty much gutted. Downstairs there was a lot of smoke damage and that will make the food a loss," said Leone. The store typically stocks deli items, cheeses and specialty foods.

Leone said the operations are being moved to their take-out food shop several doors down.

About 80 percent of the items will be there. It will all be under one roof and we'll have extra people working," said Leone.

He expects the deli store to open within three to four weeks although he said they may reconsider operating in one shop.

The state fire marshal's office is investigating the fire. Leone said he doesn't believe they are a target and suspects the breaks and fire are the work of kids.

He said police quizzed him about enemies or any bad relations with employees. "It's really no to all those things. I don't think someone was hunting us," he said.

Chuck Goodrich is new publisher

Chuck Goodrich has been named Publisher of Century Publications Inc., parent company of The Arlington Advocate.

Goodrich succeeds C. Peter Jorgensen, who has been publisher at Century Publications for 17 years. Peter and Kathryn Jorgensen sold the business to Harte-Hanks Communications on June 2.

"Chuck brings to this job an understanding of community journalism and experience in many different aspects of newspaper publishing," said James W. Hopson, president of Century Newspapers, in announcing the appointment. "His familiarity with this exciting market makes him an ideal person to carry on the legacy of quality journalism and community service that has been established here."

Goodrich joins Century Newspapers from The Middlesex News in Framingham, where he has been marketing director since 1985.

The Middlesex News is also a Harte-Hanks newspaper.

As marketing director, Goodrich was responsible for circulation and promotion at the 50,000-circulation daily newspaper. Previously at the News, he developed advertising sales materials and was a production analyst.

Goodrich spent several years as a daily newspaper reporter and editor in New Hampshire and Maine before returning to his native Massachusetts.

At Foster's (Dover, N.H.) Daily

Chuck Goodrich

Democrat he was a reporter and later became editor of the editorial pages. He was also a reporter at the Brunswick (Maine) Times Record.

"I've always believed in providing complete, comprehensive local news coverage, and you can be sure that will continue to be the emphasis here," said Goodrich.

Goodrich is a graduate of Bowdoin College and the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

He is past publisher of Careers and the MBA and co-founder of Engineering Horizons, a controlled circulation trade magazine. He and his wife, Marie Buckley, live in Wellesley.

WRKO sex survey show causes stir at town hall

By WILLIAM B. HAYNES

The switchboard lights were flashing in Arlington Town Hall and phones were ringing off the hook at selectmen's homes on Thursday.

Residents were calling in objection to the sex survey summary show being broadcast from a Winnebago parked on Massachusetts Avenue in front of Arlington Town Hall.

From 5:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., WRKO radio had highlighted the history of Arlington as a part of its "Heritage Broadcast Trails" series.

But at 2 p.m., the final host of the day, Jerry Williams, took over and with a more controversial subject, broadcasting people's reactions to the station's bi-annual sex survey.

Although Williams said the show was "no big deal," the town's attorney thought otherwise.

"It was a crisis," said town counsel John Maher. "I was acting manager while he [Town Manager Donald Marquis] was gone."

Calls began coming in the morning from citizens concerned about the show scheduled later in the day.

Surprised at the volume of calls, Maher phoned the selectmen who confirmed the nature of the show and helped plan how to best deal with the situation.

"I was not advised about the nature of the programming until 1 p.m., and I spoke with Mr. Mel Miller [Program Director at WRKO] at 1:30 p.m. and made three suggestions," said Maher. "I told him we recognized the first amendment rights, but asked them to say that we neither supported nor objected to the topic."

"If the detailed description of various sexual acts became explicit, as it had in prior days, we asked that if anything of that nature was discussed in the vicinity of the truck the broadcast would immediately cease because of unsuspecting grammar school students walking by," said Maher.

Williams believes the show is a worthwhile one, and he had a different perspective on the day's events.

"The only people disturbed were the board of selectmen," said Williams. "They were doing a disclaimer."

"We feel it's good programming," said Williams. "People respond and like hearing about it."

Local man critically injured in crash

20-year-old charged with drunk driving

By WILLIAM B. HAYNES

A 38-year-old Arlington man remains in critical condition following a two-car crash at midnight on Saturday at the intersection of Gray Street and Highland Avenue.

Joseph Stamand, 38, of 993 Massachusetts Ave. is in the intensive care unit at Mt. Auburn Hospital in Cambridge.

The driver of the other car, James G. Haas, 20, of 140 Pleasant Street in Arlington, was arrested at the scene. He was charged with operating under the influence, operating to endanger, and possession of marijuana.

According to police, Haas was driving a 1977 Toyota east on Gray Street when he collided with Stamand, who was driving a 1980 Mazda north on Highland Avenue.

Local Graduates

Cynthia Paradis

Eileen Donovan

John V. Frangioni

Paradis graduates with honors

Cynthia L. Paradis, formerly of Arlington, graduated with honors from Fitchburg State College on June 1. She holds a bachelor of arts degree in English. While attending Fitchburg State, Paradis was the co-editor of the school's student literary-arts publication. She is now working in the journalism field.

Talanian awarded B.A.

At its 68th Commencement ceremony, Connecticut College awarded the degree of bachelor of arts to Gaar E. Talanian, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Talanian of Pleasant Street.

Talanian was an economics major. He is a 1982 graduate of Tabor Academy, Marion.

Nursing Degree To Donovan

Eileen Donovan of 94 Mount Vernon st., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Donovan, received a degree in nursing from St. Joseph's College in Windham, Maine. She was a 1982 graduate of Arlington Catholic High School.

Reenstierna Gets Bridgton Diploma

Donald H. Reenstierna Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. Reenstierna, received a diploma from Bridgton Academy in North Bridgton, Maine.

As a member of the 1986 postgraduate class, Reenstierna participated in both football and golf. He plans to attend Assumption College next fall.

Frangioni Graduates From Harvard

John V. Frangioni, son of Mr. and Mrs. S.J. Frangioni, and a 1982 graduate of Arlington High School, received a bachelor's degree cum laude in engineering sciences from Harvard College.

While at Harvard, Frangioni was a teaching fellow for three years and was secretary of the Fox Club. He plans to start classes this fall under the Health Sciences and Technology Program at Harvard Medical School.

Five graduate from Babson

Arlington residents Mark J. Finnerty, Paul J. Weinstein, Arlene Boyajian, and Michelle Roussel received bachelor of science degrees at the 67th annual Babson College commencement. Dean P. Girdis, also an Arlington resident, graduated with distinction. Babson is a school of management education located in Wellesley.

The commencement address was delivered by Roger A. Emerico, president and chief executive officer of the Pepsi-Cola Company.

Thomas Yewcic receives B.A.

Thomas J. Yewcic, Cherokee Road, received a bachelor of arts degree from Holy Cross College at its 140th commencement on May 23.

Yewcic, who majored in history, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Yewcic and a graduate of Arlington high school.

Rossi Is Malden Catholic Graduate

David J. Rossi of 87 Dothan St., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rossi, graduated from Malden Catholic High School on Sunday, May 18.

Three Graduate From Simmons

Three Arlington residents received bachelors degrees during the 61st commencement at Simmons College.

Karen Danielson Wedlock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wedlock of Cherokee rd., received a bachelor of science degree in biology.

While at Simmons, Wedlock was treasurer and secretary of the Biology Liaison, and secretary of the Chemistry Liaison. In addition, she received departmental recognition in biology. She has been accepted to the Ph.D. program in chemical oceanography at the University of New Hampshire.

Katherine Grimanis, daughter of James and Maria Grimanis of Bow st., received a bachelor of science degree in math and computer science. At Simmons, Grimanis was treasurer of the Math Liaison and secretary of the Computer Science Liaison. She was also coordinator of the Simmons College student chapter of the Association for Women in Mathematics and a member of the Association for Computing Machinery.

Linda A. Rossetti, daughter of Louis and Roberta Rossetti of Ridge st., received a bachelor of arts degree in economics. Rossetti, a graduate of Arlington Catholic High School, received the John Kalchbrenner Award for excellence in economics and departmental recognition from the Economics Department. She was also a member of the College's academic honor society.

Dr. Michele Welch, and her father, Robert Welch, both earn degrees from Boston College — 50 years apart.

Father and daughter share ties to B.C.

During the recent commencement week activities at Boston College, Robert F. Welch, 95 Franklin St. was invested into the Order of the Golden Eagle. This was on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of his graduation from the college with a bachelor of arts degree.

J. Donald Monan, president of B.C. and the Honorable Sheila E. McGovern, president of the Alumni Association, presented the Certificates of Investiture and the Golden Eagle Insignia to the members of the class of 1936.

Two days later at the commencement exercises, Welch's daughter, Michele H. Welch, received her doctor of philosophy degree in Counseling psychology. Both Welch and his daughter have been life-long residents of Arlington and members of St. Agnes Parish.

Mr. Welch retired from the General Electric Company, where he was a manager with the housewares and audio products division for 40 years. He has also been a member of the Zoning Board of Appeals for over 20 years.

Dr. Welch, currently a school psychologist and guidance counselor for the Arlington Public Schools, has been in education for the past 18 years. She holds a master's degree and a certificate of advanced educational study in special education from Boston College and a bachelor of science degree in elementary education, with a music minor, from Boston State College.

From 1972 to 1974, Dr. Welch was a learning disabilities specialist for the Department of Defense School System in Upper Heyford, England. She has worked at the Children's Hospital Medical Center as a school psychology intern.

In addition to her work in education, Dr. Welch has been a psychology intern working with substance abusers at the Edith Nourse Rogers Memorial V.A. Hospital, Bedford, for the past two years.

In their spare time, both family members enjoy oil painting. Other family members include: Mrs. Robert F. Welch (formerly Marion Abbott of Melrose Street), Sharon A. Welch, both of Arlington and Robert F. Welch, Jr. of Medford.

Retarded citizens group honors citizens

The annual awards and installation of the Arlington Association For Retarded Citizens was recently held at the American Legion Post 39 Hall.

The association recognized several people for their efforts over a long period of time.

Michelle M. Anciello was cited for her numerous activities with the Parks and Recreation Commission on behalf of the handicapped of this community.

Also honored was Richard P. Danzon, DAV Chapter 49, for his yearly contributions on veterans projects to help the handicapped and for the assistance furnished by his wife, Gladys, and family.

John McGreevy, American Legion Post 39, was cited for his leadership role in making the combined veterans clubs events a success.

The association recognized Salvatore Napolitano, VFW Post 1775, for his dedication over many years in making Post 1775 available to the handicapped and their families.

Wilfred St. Martin Jr. was the master of ceremonies for the evening.

The association honored members by adding their names to the Arlington Association plaque: David Hughes, Joseph McDermott, Rishton T. Muller and Kathleen M. Quatieri.

The awards banquet was an end to 1985-86 association activities but President Charles Capobianco said the program committee is now working on a combined social and recreational event for the fall.

The following officers and directors will be responsible for operating the organization in 1986-87 season: Charles Capobianco, president; Mary Morin, vice president; J. Stanley Lewis, treasurer; Francis Donnelly, Secretary; and Joanne Sisk, immediate past president.

Elected directors were Helen Hughes, Wilfred St. Martin, Carmen Trischitta, Angelina Batista, and Fran Miller.

Information concerning the organization can be obtained by writing to Arlington Association for Retarded Citizens Inc., 136 Overlook Rd., Arlington 02174. The association welcomes all inquiries from both parents and professionals.

State transportation office delays Alewife traffic report

Release of a study of proposed traffic improvements at nearly Alewife station will be delayed at least until the end of June, according to a state transportation official.

The draft Environmental Impact Report on Alewife modifications, already several months behind schedule, will not be released for public comment for another several weeks, said Linda Jonash, a state-hired consultant.

Although the state has completed its work on the draft, the draft is now in the hands of the Federal Highway Administration.

The highway administration has had the document for several weeks and will need at least several more weeks to finish its review.

Once that review is complete, the administration will release the report to the public, paving the way for a hearing process.

Although the number and location of public hearings on the report has not been determined, Jonash said the state will present the report to town governments in Belmont, Arlington and Cambridge, the three communities affected by Alewife traffic.

Hearings may be held in the three towns individually, but also may be held in one location where all groups could come together to comment on the proposal.

Jonash plans to consult with the Alewife Transportation Advisory Committee before setting up a hearing schedule.

The hearings will take place within a 45-day period. After the hearings are concluded, the final report will be drawn up.

Work on the report has been ongoing for nearly 10 years, Jonash said.

"The schedule has fallen back," she said. "It has taken a very long time, much longer than we expected and has been a tedious, lengthy process."

Meanwhile, interim traffic modifications are on-going at the station.

A ramp providing direct access from Route 2 to the station was opened earlier this week, and work will begin in mid-July to change the Route 2 Rotary to an intersection with seven stop lights.

Once that review is complete, the

Democrats to host Dukakis party

The Fourth Middlesex District towns of Arlington, Woburn, Lexington and Winchester, will host a fundraiser for Gov. Michael S. Dukakis on Saturday, June 7, in Arlington from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. The event will be held on the lawn of the Jason Russell House, corner of Massachusetts Avenue and Jason Street.

The Jason Russell House is the site of the fiercest battle on April 19, 1775. The House is also owned by the Arlington Historical Society, and the house will be open for tours during the event.

WHO IN THE WORLD GOES TO A CHIROPRACTOR

Contrary to the usual public opinion, most patients that come to a Chiropractic office do not come because they have been involved in a major accident. It is, of course, true that people who are involved in major accidents such as automobile accidents or work injuries do get excellent results from Chiropractic care and many patients come after experiencing such injuries. However, well over half of the new patients in a Doctor of Chiropractic's office come from the symptoms they experience because of the accumulation of minor injuries (the jars, spills and bumps that most people wouldn't think could cause major problems). Generally, it is the accumulation of these minor injuries that does cause the final injury that results in recurring symptoms. If you wait until the symptoms have manifested themselves, you will generally find that the problems are more difficult to correct. In this respect Chiropractic is very similar to Dentistry. Everyone should have periodic check-ups to determine if there are developing health problems that can be "nipped in the bud." Problems caught at this point can be corrected with much less care than will be required after the problem has become well established.

This is called the "home court advantage" of health care. This is using preventive medicine to avoid future problems. If you have a question about Chiropractic and its helpfulness for a health condition contact a Doctor of Chiropractic, we are always happy to answer your questions.

Dr. John P. DeFilippo maintains Chiropractic Offices at: 400 Massachusetts Avenue, Arlington, MA 02174. 617-648-4000.

Kraus to seek a third term

State Senator Richard Kraus (D-4th Middlesex) announced May 30 that he would seek a third term in the Massachusetts State Senate. The announcement took place at a campaign kick-off party in Arlington attended by 125 supporters.

Noting "the rapidly increasing importance of state government in affecting the quality of life for Massachusetts citizens," Kraus pointed to "accomplishments, committee and special commission appointments, and future goals which place him on the cutting edge of the key issues facing Massachusetts and the district." The 4th Middlesex Senatorial district encompasses Arlington, Lexington, Winchester and Woburn.

"State government has never been more important. With the revenue limits of Proposition 2½ our cities and towns would not be making it in Massachusetts, were it not for local aid from the state," said Kraus.

"Because of current and future reductions in federal domestic spending, and the almost certain elimination of federal revenue sharing, state government already plays or soon will play a far more important role than the federal government in such areas as education, law enforcement, housing, environmental protection, and social welfare," Kraus stated.

Kraus noted that his committee and special commission assignments place him "at the heart of the commonwealth's most pressing issues."

As co-chair of the special commission on Local Aid, Kraus has begun work to equalize local aid distribution among cities and towns and to ensure rational consistent distribution that enables cities and towns to effectively include local aid in their budget and planning.

As vice-chair of the Education Committee, Kraus was instrumental in shaping and passing the 1985 Education Reform Act. "The act emphasized local control and initiative while providing incentives and funding for educational achievement, including Educational Opportunity Grants which supplement existing school budgets allowing enriched program and course offerings," Kraus said.

As chairman of the Senate Committee on Ethics in Government, he got legislation through the Senate which enabled the State Ethics Commission to resume its watchdog work, after being temporarily stopped by a court decision.

A participant in the State Advisory Committee on Family Day Care, Kraus recognizes that quality day care is a necessity for most families. Kraus inserted language in the fiscal 1986 budget which mandated inspections of all family day care centers before January 1987.

Kraus is "committed to finding ways to reduce the heavy reliance on property tax to raise revenues in Massachusetts," and is a member of the Special Commission on Tax Reform.

Kraus addressed two goals for the future; a "real" state tax cap and even greater efforts to create affordable housing.

"I believe Massachusetts currently has the size government it needs and its citizens want, and I will seek a tax cap that neither shrinks nor expands the size of government, but that ownership is of out reach," stated Kraus.

He called the housing crisis a problem that "cuts across a strata of incomes," and warned that if housing costs continued to rise at the current rate (homeowners in the Greater Boston area pay 41 percent more than the national average, and costs have increased over 30 percent in the last year), "it will begin to adversely affect economic growth."

The only solution is to build more housing for low and moderate income families," according to Kraus, "and this should help reduce the intense competition for housing which is driving up prices."

HAVE YOU HEARD?...

by PAUL J. CONNOLLY
Hearing Aid Specialist

TRENDS IN HEARING AIDS

There's recently been a significant change in the type of hearing aids in use. The preponderance of in-the-ear hearing aids being fit reflects a sharp demand for smaller, yet still powerful hearing aids that offer true sound fidelity. The future of amplification systems appears to be heading toward these more-compact instruments.

However, for the elderly patient with severe hearing loss and without the manual dexterity needed to control the smaller amplification systems, the body aid still affords a reasonable alternative.

The ultimate reason for wearing a hearing aid is to improve the ability to hear and understand. While manufacturers and professionals attempt to miniaturize the instruments, the priority of a dispenser/audiologist is to provide the client with an effective listening tool.

New clients are always welcome and appreciated!

Police Log

Ten arrests were made in Arlington over the last week, ranging from traffic offenses to indecent assault and battery on a child under age 14.

A 32-year-old Somerville man was arrested on Thursday and charged with indecent assault and battery on a child under age 14.

Tap O' Nyugen, 32, of Perkins St. in Somerville was arrested on an Arlington warrant. The incident allegedly involved a seven-year-old girl and took place in Arlington in October.

On Thursday, two Arlington men were arrested and both charged with larceny from a motor vehicle, and wilful and malicious damage to personal property.

According to police, Eric S. Anderson, 18, of 82 Appleton St., and William C. Walker, 22, of 266 Broadway were arrested at 11:11 a.m. Thursday morning on Massachusetts Avenue after police observed them around the WRKO radio van parked in front of Town Hall.

Police say the registration plate was torn off the vehicle, the side hatch opened and things pulled out, and the molding damaged.

WRKO sent an engineer out in the early hours of the morning so the show could go on the air.

Also on Thursday, a 21-year-old New York man was arrested at 1:50 a.m. and charged with possession of a class D substance, and operating after suspension and without registration.

According to police, the man was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue after police observed him driving erratically.

A 24-year-old Somerville man was arrested on Thursday and charged with operating without registration or insurance.

On Friday, a 23-year-old Arlington man was arrested on the tennis courts at Robbins Farm at 3:30 a.m. and charged with a Concord speeding warrant.

On Saturday, a 16-year-old Somerville youth was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue in East Arlington and charged with attempted larceny from a motor vehicle and possession of burglarious tools.

Also on Saturday, a 17-year-old Arlington youth was arrested on Cutler Hill Road and charged with breaking and entering a motor vehicle in the night and malicious damage to personal property.

According to police, Theodore P. Soter, 17, of 29 Howard Road, was arrested by a car with a smashed window and damaged dash.

On Sunday, a 29-year-old Andover man was arrested in the St. James Parish parking lot and charged with being a minor transporting alcohol.

Housebreaks

Town board has opening

The Board of Selectmen announced that there is a position available on the nine-member Arlington Preservation Fund, Inc.

The vacancy that currently exists should be filled by someone with a background dealing with finances, such as banking, commercial or residential lending, etc. The members would be required to attend periodic evening meetings, either once or twice a month.

The individual appointed would be one of nine members who would make decision on granting approval of low-interest Historic Preservation Loans and would also be responsible for keeping committee finance records, coordinating the information with the town treasurer's office.

The Selectmen invite interested individuals who wish to be considered for the appointment to submit a resume to the Office of the Board of Selectmen by June 16.

Crasco wins art scholarship award

Jeffrey A. Crasco, a graduating senior at Arlington High School, was the proud recipient of this year's Philip G. MacFarlane Scholarship Award.

Jeffrey has won several awards for his outstanding work including the Massachusetts Traffic Safety Contest, Boston Edison Energy Conservation Contest and the New England Patriots Defensive Line Contest.

Having shown great interest in the arts throughout his years in school, Jeffrey has participated in several extracurricular courses including courses at the Museum of Fine Art, Boston, and recent studies with David Ardito.

Jeffrey is planning to attend the Rhode Island School of Design in September.

Selectmen seek associate member for zoning board

The Board of Selectmen announced that there is a position available on the Zoning Board of Appeals as an associate member.

There are three regular members of the Zoning Board of Appeals and two associate members who are required to sit in place of the regular members on certain occasions.

The selectmen invite interested individuals who wish to be considered for the appointment to submit a resume to the office of the board of selectmen by June 16.

Cablesystems to survey viewers on local programs

Arlington Cablesystems will be enclosing a local programming survey in the June customer bills.

The purpose of the survey is to assess viewership of the local channel channel 3. Specifically, viewer interest in programs shown on the local channel will be measured. Results will be used to assist in the decision-making process for future

programming

By completing the survey and returning it to Cablesystems, cable customers will be helping to make the community channel representative of the interests of the community.

Subscribers are urged to take a few moments to fill out the short survey and return it along with their regular payment.

It's decision time on Beacon Hill for Massachusetts health care.

Malpractice legislation could seriously affect the quality and availability of health care, for you, your family, and future generations.

The hospitals of Massachusetts want to continue giving you the quality health care that you need, but they can't do it without doctors.

Lawmakers are now conducting hearings on House Bill 5525 and deciding on legislation to resolve the medical malpractice insurance crisis. Rising insurance premiums are forcing many doctors to consider leaving or changing their practices, and discouraging young doctors from entering medicine in Massachusetts; subsequently affecting your life.

Give your Senator or Representative a call. Tell them that Malpractice Insurance Reform must be passed as soon as possible, for you, and for your health.

Residents asked to conserve water

By DEIRDRE DRUMMEY

In Arlington next week, as well as across the state, residents will be asked to cut back on water consumption and to think carefully about water use in honor of Water Conservation Week.

The program was actually begun by Arlington several years ago in accordance with a public awareness policy of the Arlington Public Works Department. The goal of the original program was to keep the citizens aware of water shortages and to get them involved in saving water.

In 1981, Arlington public works officials successfully urged former Gov. Ed King to follow Arlington's lead by issuing a proclamation setting aside a week for water conservation.

Gov. Michael Dukakis has issued a similar proclamation for next week.

In May of 1985, a "drought watch" was declared for the metropolitan water supply system due to abnormally low levels at Quabbin Reservoir. The "watch" is still in effect.

According to public works office manager Jack Bowler, "We should be concerned, but it's not an emergency." He stresses that the water conservation program is "trying to get people to be more prudent" in the use of water.

Bowler compared the water conservation program to the oil crisis of the late '70s. Before the crisis, people used as much oil as they wanted. During the crisis people had to scramble to cut back. Now, people continue to cut back, despite the oil glut, since they realize how another shortage

How To Conserve Water
	Normal Use Conservation Use
Shower	Water running Wet down, soap up, rinse off 25 gallons 4 gallons
Brushing Teeth	Tap running Wet brush, rinse briefly 10 gallons 1/2 gal. or less
Tub Bath	Full 35 gallons Minimal water level 10-12 gallons
Toilet Flushing	Depending on tank size Using tank displacement level 5-7 gallons 4-6 gallons
Dishwashing	Tap Running Wash and rinse in dishpans or sink 30 gallons 5 gallons
Automatic Dishwasher	Full cycle 16 gallons Short cycle 7 gallons
Shaving	Tap running 20 gallons Fill basin 1 gallon
Washing Hands	Tap running 2 gallons Fill basin 1 gallon
Washing Machine	Full cycle, top water level 60 gallons Short cycle, minimal water level 27 gallons
Outdoor Watering	Average hose 10 gallons per minute Lowest priority— Use little or none aide says that the focus is "getting people alert to the fact that a lot of the things we do are really wasteful."

For example, running water while brushing your teeth uses up to 10 gallons of water. Running the tap only while wetting the brush and rinsing briefly uses half a gallon or less.

Riley also suggested keeping a bottle of water in the refrigerator to limit further running water.

She also urged those with leaky faucets to have them fixed immediately. Just a small drip will waste up to 25 gallons of water in 24 hours and streams of water waste 100 to 400 gallons daily.

Another water conservation idea is to water lawns and gardens at night, after the sun has gone down. Watering while the sun is out is very inefficient since most of the water evaporates before it can be used.

During Water Conservation Week there will be exhibits in both the Town Hall lobby and in the Robbins Library. At the Town Hall, posters, bumper stickers, and water-saving devices will be on display. Books and posters will be displayed in a call-in segment of the program.

Arlington Cable will sponsor a film highlighting water conservation and area restaurants will also publicize conservation.

Homeowners will directly be affected by the 12,500 brochures that will be handed out by meter readers.

Riley reminds citizens that "Water is what we call a gift—a gift of life."

Results for other candidates participating in the program were:

James Roosevelt (D) seven votes;

Representative Thomas Gallagher (D) six votes; Joseph Kennedy (D) five votes; Clark Abt (R) four votes;

Robert O'Connell (D) two votes, and Robert Cappucci (D) one vote.

James Speigel (D), Richard Black (D), Richard Black (D), Markham Lyons (R), and Socialist Workers candidate Jon Hillson received no votes.

The two-hour forum was broadcast live on WBZ-Radio with talk show host Peter Meade as moderator.

The candidates answered prepared questions on a broad range of economic issues, and they fielded questions from WBZ listeners in a call-in segment of the program.

Teachers honored

Two veteran teachers, Margaret Tacito, and E. Belle Fitzgerald, were honored at a retirement reception recently at the Brackett School by friends, colleagues and students. Both began teaching at Brackett in 1964.

Boys Club gives Stan Lewis annual youth service award

J. Stanley Lewis of 113 Sylvia St. received the Arlington Boys & Girls Club's "Outstanding Service to Youth Award" at the club's annual meeting Monday at the Winchester Country Club.

Lewis has been an active member in such youth organizations as Little League, the Special Olympics, and the Cub Scout and Girl Scout program at the Locke School. Lewis has also been involved with the Arlington Association for Retarded Citizens.

"J. Stanley Lewis has expressed a genuine and unfaltering concern in all aspects of the growth and development of the youth of Arlington," said George Faulkner, executive director of the boys and girls club.

At the annual meeting, chairman Ben Cole announced the club's new corporators and board of directors. Chosen as corporators were: Dr. Patrick Campobasso, Dorothy Capezuto, John Carroll, William Casey, Ellen Digby, Mary Anna and Charles Foskett, John Hanley, Janemarie and George Hillier, Dorothy and Thomas Miller, Aubrey Tobey, Fraser Walsh, and Walter Wilcox.

The director elected to the board for a one-year term was John Wortsman Jr.; for a two-year term: John Bowler. Robert Bulens, William would affect them. "Water should be treated in the same way," said Bowler.

The slogan for this year's Water Conservation Week is "Think About Water Before You Use It." This slogan sums up the public works department's emphasis on saving water in everyday routines. Mary Riley, public works administrative homeowner will directly be affected by the 12,500 brochures that will be handed out by meter readers.

Riley reminds citizens that "Water is what we call a gift—a gift of life."

Results for other candidates participating in the program were:

Comment

Greetings from the publisher

Earlier this week, The Arlington Advocate changed hands. This is the first issue published by Harte-Hanks Communications and my first issue as your publisher. A few words are in order.

First, you should know that Harte-Hanks is excited about coming to Arlington. This is an exciting, healthy town with a wonderful personality. It has a strong downtown, good schools and services, and a myriad of attributes that make it a special place. It's a great place to do business, a great place to publish a newspaper.

Second, we'll continue to have an office in Arlington. For now, it will be the familiar 4 Water Street location. But sometime this summer we're moving. We'll tell you where we're going; it probably won't be far. Meanwhile, the headquarters for Century Publications will remain at 3 Church Street in nearby Winchester, where we have been for decades. If you have something on your mind, please feel free to stop by or give me a call at that address.

Third, your hometown newspaper isn't going to change. The Advocate has developed a personality of its own over the past century. It's that local identity, that finger on the pulse of the community, that makes the Advocate special. And we're committed to preserving that.

Stories, headlines, editing -- in short, the activities that make this paper unique -- will continue to be generated by Editor Catherine Walther, Assistant Editor William Haynes, Sports Editor Walter Moynihan and other staff members here in Arlington. Editorial positions will be determined and written locally. We'll evolve as the needs of our readers change, but our basic mission -- that of providing you with complete information of the town and the things happening around you -- will remain unchanged.

I look forward to getting to know you, the people of Arlington.

During the coming weeks and months I hope to hear your thoughts about the Advocate and its role in the community. This an exciting town with an exciting newspaper, and I'm excited about continuing The Arlington Advocate's rich tradition of community service.

State House

School Breakfast (S 1677) - House 86-61, gave near final approval to a bill requiring several more Massachusetts communities to provide a school breakfast program giving free or low cost breakfasts to needy children. Earlier the House 81-45 rejected an amendment providing that local school committees conduct public hearings and then decide whether to participate in the program.

Bill supporters, noting the program will be reimbursed by the federal government, said it will provide breakfasts to 40,000 needy kids. Bill opponents said the decision should be up to local communities. Both roll calls are listed. The first is on passage of the bill 86-61. A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Cusack did not vote. Gibson voted yes.

Consultants (H 5800) - House 110-39, rejected a budget amendment striking a section of the bill providing payments to various consultants.

Amendment supporters said the '03' consultant account is out of control and should be examined.

Opponents said these are simply legitimate bills which the state owes.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Gibson voted no. Cusack did not vote.

Cusack and Gibson voted no on the second roll call.

Asking Eleanor the chances of a good meal

By TERRY MAROTTA

A little girl we know came to our house for dinner not long ago. I noticed, about midway through my chicken, that she wasn't eating anything.

"So, Eleanor," I began jauntily, "what gives? You're not hungry tonight?"

"That isn't it, Mrs. Marotta," she answered shyly. "It's just that... well, it's just that you're not as skilled a cook as my mother."

I couldn't argue with her there, boy.

She was right.

I used to be a pretty good cook, but now I stink.

And do you know why I stink?

Because of my kitchen.

I live with a kitchen that was in business when the Underground Railway passed through these parts.

A kitchen so old and cold and dark, you have to use three lights and a space heater to work there in the dizzy bloom of summer.

A kitchen people laugh right out loud at when they walk into it for the first time.

For one thing, its layout is all wrong. The sink is here, under the windows, the refrigerator 10 feet away.

The stove is 10 feet from that, and the only place for the table is smack in the middle of the three.

When the whole family sits down to eat, you can't open any one of them if somebody wants more milk from the fridge, two of us have to get up so we can get at it.

If a cake needs checking, three of us have to move.

And if the dishwasher needs loading, the whole family — ancestors, ghosts, the whirling genes of unborn generations and trailing wisps of DNA — have to troop out of the room entirely.

When we were first married and eating on $15 a week, I felt sorry for myself because we had a kitchen so small and ill-equipped we had to keep our dishes in the drawers.

Now I'd be delighted to keep dishes in the drawers, only there aren't any drawers.

There are no cabinets and no counters either.

As a result, I've learned to mix cakes in my lap and slice onions in mid-air.

And OK, sometimes a little onion gets in with the cake batter.

Added to all this, we have appliances so old they're on Social Security.

Our stove, for example, was built for trying doughnuts or popping dumplings in.

Never mind that its oven is the size of a breadbox.

Never mind that my husband, each Thanksgiving, brings home a turkey that looks like Arnold Schwarzenegger.

Last year it took three adults to jam the thing in there, and the entire kitchen set pushed up against the door to keep it in.

There are, I should add, pantries attached to this dream-room. One is a short car-ride from the main kitchen, but the other is just around the corner.

The first, the butler's pantry, so called, has a sink and a vast array of cabinets for sherry glasses and champagne goblets and brandy snifters.

The other, the "food" pantry, has a massive slab set into its small counter for the making of fudge and open shelves for the storing of preserves.

In short, ours is a kitchen designed for another era. Perhaps servants could function well in it.

Nobody lost much sleep, back then, worrying about making life easy for them, lord knows.

They could spend all day meandering from one dark corner to another, working on the evening meal.

With us, it's a different story. As is true in many households today, the Chief Cook also doubles as Academic Adviser, Dispenser of Band-Aids, and Arbiter of All Disputes.

You come to my house hungry. I'll do what I can for you. We can rustle up some fudge I guess, or throw in a batch of dumpling doughnuts.

Hey, we can always hop in the car and drive to the butler's pantry for cocktails.

If you're looking for something nutritious and tasty, though — chicken, let's say, with broccoli and potatoes — well, you ask Eleanor what your chances are. She'll give it to you straight.

Letters To The Editor

Continued effort needed to solve teen problems

TO THE EDITOR:

Congratulations to your reporter, Catherine Walther, for her excellent story in the May 22 edition, on the forum at the First Parish Church on "Teen Pregnancy in Arlington: Fact or Fiction?"

Your decision to give this story from page space reflected the importance of this difficult issue.

The splendid panel who shared information and insights with us on May 18th made it clear that teenage pregnancy in Arlington is a symptom of a cluster of community problems which affect all of us, and for which we all share responsibility.

Of course the direct and severest impact, often devastating, of pregnancy for an unmarried young woman still in school, falls on her and her family. The discussion at the forum emphasized that these unwanted and unplanned pregnancies arise because of ignorance and thoughtlessness on the part of teenagers, coupled with a community setting that is conducive to the kind of mindless behavior that results in pregnancy.

For example, the role of alcohol and drug abuse is often linked directly to this unhappy result.

I write at this time to urge that those concerned with these interrelated problems not stop with one forum, but continue devoting attention to the issues involved. The whole community has a stake in finding ways to deal more effectively with the underlying problems which sometimes manifest themselves in the form of a teenage pregnancy.

In particular, we should encourage our school system to develop a curriculum designed to prepare children and young people for life, including their own sexuality, peer pressures, substance use and abuse, personal responsibility, etc.

I am convinced that to be effective this curriculum must be integrated in the school program from the early primary grades right through high school. It cannot be done effectively in a one semester course.

Because of the sensitivities raised in treating this range of material in our public schools, we as parents and citizens must give those responsible our input and our support.

Teachers, kids enjoyed Apache

TO THE EDITOR:

On Saturday, May 17, the John A. Bishop School had its annual Spring Fair. We would like to take this opportunity to thank the community for coming.

It is our hope that everyone enjoyed the day. We would also like to express our gratitude to the following businesses and organizations that supported our effort.

We would like to thank the Menotomy Drug Store, Duffy's Carpet, Fitness First, Royal Discount Books, Hudson's, Browne Drug, Holiday Consultants, Mirak Cheverolet, Tiberi's Florist, Peter's Kitchen, the Town Hall Restaurant, Jason's Hair Salon, Swanson's Jewelry, and Divinity's Splendor Glow. Thanks also to Garron's Restaurant, Symme's Mini Mart, Video Horizons, the Foodmaster, the Stop and Shop, Davidson Chevrolet of Malden, and Walcott Sales and Service of Arlington, Brigham's Ice Cream, Papa Gino's, and Friendly's Ice Cream.

DelGazio said the protection of pedestrians can be accomplished without the installation of the push-button lights and he said an effort will be made to pick up the traffic enforcement along Mass. ave.

According to DelGazio, the push-button lights cost roughly $12,000 to $15,000 apiece, and might impede traffic and lead to rear end collisions if they were installed.

Our Spring Fair was successful and we are grateful for all the contributions and help we received from the area businesses as well as those individuals associated with the Bishop School.

Resident says sign rules need to be strictly enforced

TO THE EDITOR:

Yes, let's enforce rules about business signs in Arlington!

Your recent picture of the Getty Station on Massachusetts Avenue at Tufts Street (with its 23 sloppy signs) was succinct photo-journalism.

This honored Arlington location — the historic Black Horse Tavern once stood on this same spot, and it is directly across from the beautifully refurbished Bulfinch Tower on the Calvary Methodist Church — shouldn't be littered with junky signs.

We have to decide: Do we want Mass. Ave. to look like the famous historic route it is and the Main Street of a family town, or do we want it to look like a truck route?

Mary Mullowney

TO THE EDITOR:

Our sincere thanks to the Brackett PTO co-presidents, Karen Forzati and Helen Friel and their committees, whose months of work and attention to every detail, made our lovely retirement reception at Brackett School an evening to be cherished forever.

To all Brackett students past and present who attended our retirement reception, our heartfelt thanks. You made the evening complete. It was wonderful to see you.

And to parents, friends, fellow teachers and administrators, as well as our families, our sincere appreciation for your efforts in making this such a happy event.

TO THE EDITOR:

The AHS softball coaches would like to thank all those Arlington and Stoneham fans who contributed food to the Pine Street Inn at our May 17 scrimmage. The teams collected two large cases of food for the inn, the second year in a row AHS has invited an opponent to join in making this contribution.

Church News

Park Avenue Church names new minister

The congregation at Park Avenue Church, Arlington Heights (United Church of Christ) met Sunday and voted to call the Rev. Anthony Steven Kill to be its new minister, succeeding the Reverend Martin T. Batt, who moved to Holden last August. The Rev. Dadie Scorsa has been serving as interim minister since September.

Mr. Kill, a native Minnesota and a graduate of Saint Annes College and Crozier Seminary both in Fort Wayne, Indiana, served during the past year as interim minister at First Church in Cambridge. Congregational. Before that, he was pastor of the First United Church of Christ, Bayonne, N.J. His wife, Karen Fritz, is also ordained into the ministry and holds a part-time pastorate in Winthrop.

Mr. Kill will take up his duties at Park Avenue Church on Sept. 1.

He and his wife will be officially welcomed by the Park Avenue Church family in September.
